MINING NEWS.

The District Preparing For a Big Season's Output.

The Pogue has many hundreds of tons of gravel spar on the dump and will start the wagons as soon as the roads are solid.

The Kewanee Fire Brick company will resume the exportation of that material from their Stephen mine when the spring comes.

A large quantity of fine mining machinery has been unloaded at our depot and moved out to the various mining camps during the past month.

The buildings, including equipment machinery recently installed at the Riley mine by the Marion Zinc company represent an outlay of $10,000. Our loads of machinery have been received and unloaded at Cynthierville. Several more are on the way.

It is not improbable that the steam engine will eventually supersede the gasoline in this mining district. The latter engine is too uncertain for hoisting purposes, and there's no telling when it's going to "duke" you.

The Lucile Mining company are loading two cars for the Lady Ensley Furnace in the Birmingham, Ala. district. They also have orders for two cars more to go as soon as they can get it out and loaded. In the month of February this company shipped 500,000 pounds.

The Kentucky Flour Spar company during the past week has shipped on an average a little more than 40 tons per day, or a total for the week of 500,000 lbs. of fluor spar. They also shipped one car load of lead. These products are shipped to the various markets of the country, from Michigan to Connecticut.

The famous Rock Spring coal field, generally known as the Thompson coal fields, and consisting of some one thousand acres, immediately north of the town of Wheatcroft, has just been purchased by Mr. Irving H. Wheatcroft and it is generally thought that the property will be developed immediately, the consideration being $25,000.

It is generally understood that a new shaft or opening will be made on the property at once and it is probable that a spur line of railroad about a mile long will be built to the center of this coal field, to reach the most advantageous place in which to open it. Dixon Journal.

The Pogue spar mine, at Frazer, is running full time with double shifts, tilling an order for ten thousand tons of spar for a south or firm. The company are also negotiating with another firm for the delivery of 15,000 tons of spar annually. This mine is getting out some of the finest white grinding spar in the entire district, and has the most perfect hoisting machinery, washers, etc., that money can buy. This mine is worked by the Marion Mineral company and is in charge of that old reliable mining expert and clever gentleman, Fred Clement, General Superintendent of the company, with Mr. W. A. Oliver as mine boss, and a better mine boss would be hard to find. This mine is now shipping from Mexico six or eight cars of spar weekly, with a daily mine output of about 125 tons.

The Courier-Journal of Wednesday contained the following article:

"C. S. Knight of Fort Wayne, Ind., spent $10,000 in Louisville, yesterday, for machinery to be used in the new mines of Livingston, Caldwell and Crittenden counties. A rich field of lead, zinc, fluor spar and nickel has been discovered there recently, and eleven shafts have been sunk by Mr. Knight's company. The machinery which was bought yesterday consisted of boilers, engines and drills and other mining appliances which will be installed in those mines.

"Twenty companies are at work in this field, and the investment which has been made in the three counties will aggregate between $500,000 and $750,000. The progress made so far indicates that the field will return large dividend on the expenditures, and the men who are interested are investing additional money to make the operations assume a modern and aggressive aspect. Mr. Knight was accompanied by the engineer of his company, and bought the best machinery that the market afford.

"While the existence and character of the fields have been familiar to capitalists engaged in industrial development for several years, the active mining operations began only a few months ago. Mr. Knight says that the air of activity pervades the mining field.

NEW SALEM.

Robt Mahan, Harry Harpending and Samuel Wring are on the sick list.

Our farmers got a move on themselves the few fair days last week.

Mr. Editor, when we read the papers and see the crimes committed all over the United States, and look around us and see how peaceable our people are and how little crime is committed in Crittenden county, we thank the Governor of all good gifts that our lot is cast among such people as live in good old Crittenden.

Our mining interests seem to be taking on some shape again and as soon as the weather gets set the prospecting will begin again. Parties have been through our section in the past ten days taking options where they could secure them.

Just supposing the case: Suppose we had a good turnpike from Salem to Marion, our wagon men would not have to unload their goods in the mud holes all along the road. They could put on good summer time loads and go ahead, but that would not suit; oh no! we had better pull on through the mud, it only lasts 4 or 5 months in the year.

Mrs Nancy White and daughter Miss Nonie, of Levias, were the guests of Mrs. Henry Brouster, Sunday.

Phelia Tyner has returned home from Arkansas.

Your correspondent was over in our sister county, Livingston last week; we found the woods full of candidates for county offices. Is it not time some of our own boys were getting acquainted with the good people.

Jesse Parker of Livingston county was the guest of his uncle R. S. Threlkeld.

Mrs Josephine Tyner has been the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Harris, of Salem, the past week.

Married March 13, Wm Kirk to Miss McWhirter. The groom is one of our neighborhood young men, and his bride is the charming daughter of our neighbor Lish McWhirter.

The smallest tobacco crop raised in this section for years will be planted this season.

Benj Davis and family visited relatives Saturday and Sunday, near Hurricane church.

We never saw so many people complaining of colds and grippe, every family has one or more laid up with one or the other.

Our farmers got a move on themselves the few fair days we had last week, some few sowed oats and started their plows.

Harry and John Harpending both reached home last week, the former from California and the latter from Texas.

We don't know what has come over our farmers for the last year or so. A few years ago every farmer raised wheat to bread him and some to sell; he also raised sorghum cane enough to make all the syrup he and family could use and some to sell, and everything else necessary for family use, while now there is not half enough wheat growing to bread the people and a gallon of sorghum molasses can not be bought. What is the matter? can farmers buy these things cheaper than they can raise them? We think not.

The hay crop in this part of the country will be the shortest in many years, owing to the dry fall and hard winter having killed all the grass sown last fall; hundreds of acres that were sown last fall are being sown again this spring.

Rev Lowery came up to his regular appointment at New Salem Saturday and Sunday.

Trade is getting scarce among the farmers, owing to the long, cold, cold winter.

Benj Davis and family visited relatives Saturday and Sunday, near Hurricane church.

The Press went visiting last week and did not reach our office until Saturday.

Miss Essie Whitt of Frances was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Cora Tyner, last week.

Wess Eaton of East Levias was in this section last week talking up neighborhood telephone; we have made some personal inquiry and find that our people are very anxious for the line to be built; and when our mines open up we think there will be no trouble for

Mr. Eaton to get the mine in operation, as it will be in every mines interest to have phone communication with the outside neighborhood.

We understand that the fruit crop is uninjured; that is, the peach crop is safe.

Charley Millikan is arranging to go to Missouri as soon as the spring opens.

Our old friend Henry Brouster has turned his attention to horse trading; if a man does want to trade he had better pass Henry by.

FREDONIA AND KELSEY.

Miss Leassa Wilborn, of Marion visited her many friends here last week.

R. M. Richardson, a first class blacksmith and woodworker, is running A. S. Threlkeld's shop; he is prepared to do anything in his line and is always to be found at the shop.

W. F. Ackridge and family moved to Marion last week; hope they may prosper in their new home.

George Reed spent Sunday in Princeton.

If you want anything in the blacksmith or wood line go to Richardson at Threlkeld's shop.

Charlie Dobbins rented a farm in the Dogwood neighborhood and moved there last week.

Just received another load of that good Salem flour.

S. C. Bennett & Son.

Rev Miller filled his usual appointment at the Baptist church Sunday and Sunday night.

If you want your horse well shod, take him to Richardson.

Mr. Larkin, the depot agent, has moved to Charlie Dobbins' house, near the hotel.

Home made new ground plows and Chattanooga turning plows at A. S. Threlkeld's shop, Kelsey.

Wanted, eggs, poultry, etc.; also want to sell you dry goods, shoes, groceries and hardware.

Ed E. Weldon and family visited relatives in this place Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Cross, sewing machine agt., was here Saturday.

Mrs. King, wife of George H. King, who has been an invalid for some time, suffered a relapse and died Saturday. Her remains were interred in the family graveyard, Rev. John King preaching the funeral sermon. She leaves a husband, two children and a host of friends to mourn her loss.

F. E. Davis, of Baker, was in this section Saturday on business.

The families of Messrs. Frank, Guss and Bart Summerville attended the burial of Mrs. King.

THE MAKING OF THE FLAG!

Oration of Miss Hilda Schwab, Washington's birthday, Feb. 22nd, 1901 at Marion Opera House.

Flag of a thousand battles,
Beautiful flag of the free,
Waving from lake to ocean,
Waving from sea to sea;
Old Glory, Old Glory, the world waits
thy story,
Float on, float ever on, o'er land and sea;
Old Glory, Old Glory, the world waits
thy story,
Float on, float ever on, thou emblem
of the free!"

Riley.
There is a picture going the rounds in the land which is not only pictorially patriotic, but is symbolic of our country's growth and power.

In the room, which at once strikes the eye as simple yet tasteful, sit two stately gentlemen, a third standing to the rear and near these, while opposite the group, sits a woman of noble mein and across her lap falls a cloth of stars and stripes in glorious color; she is shaking out its folds, while her countenance beams with question, "How now, my good friends, have I met with my needle your suggestions and your hopes?" And looking intently at the noble faces of those courteous gentlemen you almost hear them say, "Tis well done, Madame Betsey,
'tis all that we can wish."

We get now the force of the scene, it is the birth of Old Glory.

There it is, the strongest, because the central and permanent part of the deeds of that day.

How matchless in color—with a field of blue into which had been woven inextinguishable stars; the red stripes typifying the glory, the valor and the self-sacrifice of the men who died that liberty might live; and the white emblematic of purity, fitly representing those principles to which a nation had been dedicated.

"When Freedom from her mountain height
Unfurled her standard to the air
She tore the azure robe of night
And set the stars of glory there;
She mingled with its gorgeous dyes
The milky bluid of the skies,
And stripped its pure celestial white
With streaks of the morning light."

What grace in its stars of white, its field of blue and its bars of white and red! In truth, the

"Flag of the free hearts' hope and home,
By angel hands to valor given,
They stars have lit the weikin dome
And all thy hues were born in Heaven."

But is the flag more noteworthy or so typical of America than those who watched its infant hours?

There sits the leader in the field; the man who beneath the great elm on Boston Common, swore never to retire from the field of battle until he had met the necessity that had called him to it, to make the freedom of his country acknowledge America's powerful in arms as she had been gentle in resistance.

Old Flag, you had nothing to fear
The sword of Washington guarded your cradle, the undying devotion of his great soul was to follow you upon every field.
And at last his sagacious mind would transmit you from the field of battle to the civic arena and there ere he died have his countrymen swear allegiance.

When that unhappy war swept over our country like "a troubled vision o'er the least of dreaming Sorrow," when the stars and stripes were hauled down on Fort Sumter in '61 flags without number were raised above every fortress in the land and all the glorious achievements which that flag represented with all its hallowed memories glowed with burning fervor in the heart of every lover of liberty and union. The mad assault which was made upon the flag at that time aroused its defenders and kindled a patriotic flame which could not be quenched until it had demolished the unholy cause which assaulted our holy banner.

But what would have become of the American flag and Washington's valor had it not been for the great silent force of men and women whose assistance had not been given our glorious cause would have been lost; the worth of whose aid can hardly be estimated, given in such strenuous times. Such a man was Robt. Morris, the man who gave America credit at home and abroad. Grouped with Washington in the picture his confidence indicated strength in his cause and a confidence which was not mere stipulation, but in actual fact in the use of his purse. Had it not been for Robt.
Morris the campaign of 1781 would probably never have been conducted for he contributed his entire fortune to further his country's interests and to protect the flag.

Moneyed men have always been found to support their countries in days of dis-ordered credit; for instance, Lincoln issued millions of greenbacks in the necessity of the hour, worth in truth, no more than so much paper; but it bore the promise of the United States to pay sometime, somewhere, and instantly gold coin pouring forth to buy it.

Here's to the Morrises, the Shermans, the Vanderbilts and the Carnegies and all those matchless financiers who sus-tain a nation's power which has been gained by her soldiers and statesmen!

The great silent men and women of the world—no one knows how much they accomplish. In our revolt from English tyranny a Mrs. Murray aided Washington by entertaining some British officers at a critical time when all the cunning of Putnam would have been for naught had she not foiled the English.

What a world of glorious action has been inspired by the Star Spangled Banner.

One man, tho' a Washington, could not have held the nation from defeat but many were required to maintain its organization, so as a representative of the many, in one there stands out Wm.
Ross, the Commoner, in whose home the flag was made.

My our flag always be the embodied sentiment of Washington, its originator, and excite in the hearts of all the nations to love, the holy patriotism, the heavenly devotion and sacrifice which went with every stitch placed in the folds of the first flag by the supple fingers of

Jack "HENDERSON" GALLAGHER.

What is Life?

In the last analysis nobody knows, but we do know that it is under strict law. Abuse that law even slightly, pain results. Irregular living means derangement of the organs, resulting in Constipation, Headache or Liver trouble. Dr. King's New Life Pill quickly re-adjusts this. It's gentle, yet thorough. Only 25c at Woods &
Orme's drug store.

"Chronic cases" that what the doctors call them which in common English means—long sickness.

To stop the continued loss of flesh they need Scott's Emulsion. For the feeling of weakness they need Scott's Emulsion.

It makes new flesh and gives new life to the weak

Scott's Emulsion gets thin and weak persons out of the rut. It makes new flesh, strengthens the nerves and gives appetite

Scott's Emulsion can be taken as long as sickness

There's new strength

ALICE OF OLD VINCENNES

CHAPTER XVII.

ON the 5th day of February, 1779, Colonel George Rogers Clark led an army across the Kaskaskia river and camped. This was the first step in his march toward the Wabash. An army! Do not smile. Fewer than 200 men, it is true, answered the roll call when Father Gibault lifted the cross and blessed them.

It was an army, small indeed, but yet an army, even though so rudely equipped that, could we now see it before us, we might wonder of what use it could possibly be in a military way.

Clark knew when he set out on his march to Vincennes that he was not indulging a visionary impulse. The enterprise was one that called for all that manhood could endure, but not more. With the genius of a born leader he measured his task by his means. He knew his own courage and fortitude and understood the best capacity of his men. He had genius that he possessed the secret of extracting from himself and from his followers the last refinement of devotion to purpose. There was a certainty, from first to last, that effort would not flag at any point short of the topmost possible strain.

The march before them lay over a magnificent plain, mostly prairie, rich as the delta of the Nile, but extremely difficult to traverse. The distance, as the route led, was about 170 miles. On account of an open and rainy winter all the basins and flat lands were inundated, often presenting leagues of water ranging in depth from a few inches to three or four feet. Colonel Clark understood perfectly the strategie importance of Vincennes as a post commanding the Wabash and as a base of communication with the many Indian tribes north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi. Francis Vigo (may his name never fade!) had brought him a comprehensive and accurate report of Hamilton's strength and the condition of the fort and garrison. This information confirmed his belief that it would be possible not only to capture Vincennes, but Detroit as well.

Just seven days after the march began the little army encamped for a night's rest at the edge of a wood, and here, just after nightfall, when the fires were burning merrily and the smell of broiling buffalo steaks burdened the damp air, a wizened old man suddenly appeared, bow or from where nobody had observed. He was dirty and in every way disreputable in appearance, looking like an animated mummy, bearing a long rifle on his shoulder and walking with the somewhat halting activity of a very old yet vigorous and energetic simian. Of course it was Uncle Jazon, "Uncle Jazon's general," as Father Beret had dubbed him.

"Well, here I am!" he cried, approaching the fire by which Colonel Clark and some of his officers were cooking supper. "But ye can't guess in a mile of who I am to save yer livers an' lights."

He danced a few stiff steps, which made the water gush out of his tattered moccasins, then doffed his nondescript cap and nodded his scalpsie head in salutation to the commander.

Clark looked inquiringly at him, while the old fellow grimaced and rubbed his shrunken chin.

"I smell yer fat a-fryin' somethin' like a mile away, an' it set my inards to grumblin' for a snack, so I jes' thought I'd drop in on ye an' chaw with ye."

"Your looks are decidedly against you," remarked the colonel, with a dry smile. He had recognized Uncle Jazon after a little sharp scrutiny. "I suppose, however, that we can let you gnaw the bones after we've got off the meat."

"Thank ye, thank ye, plenty good. A feller ain't as hungry as I am kin go through a bone like a feesh through water."

Clark laughed and said:

"I don't see any teeth that you have worth mentioning, but your gums may be unusually sharp."

"M'ass, 'toun as sharp as yer wit, Colonel Clark, an' sharper 'n yer eyes, a long shot. Ye don't know me, do ye? Take another squint at me, an' see if ye kin 'member a good lookin' man."

"You have somewhat the appearance of an old scamp of the name of Jazon that formerly loitered around with a worthless gun on his shoulder, and used to run from every Indian he saw down yonder in Kentucky." Clark held out his hand and added cordially:

"How are you, Jazon, my old friend, and where upon earth have you come from?"

Uncle Jazon pounced upon the hand and gripped it in his own knotted fingers, gazing delightedly up into Clark's bronzed and laughing face.

"Where'd I come from? I come from everywhere. First time I ever got lost in all my born days. I've been a trampin' round in the water seems like a week, crazy as a pizened rat, not a knowin' north from south nor my big toe from my turnip! Who's got some tobacco?"

Uncle Jazon's story, when presently he told it, interested Clark deeply. He and Kenton had, with wise judgment, separated on escaping from the Indian camp, Kenton striking out for Kentucky, while Uncle Jazon went toward Kaskaskia.

The information that Beverley would be shot as soon as he was returned to Hamilton caused Colonel Clark serious worry of mind. Not only the fact that Beverley, who had been a charming friend and a most gallant officer, was now in such imminent danger, but the impression (given by Uncle Jazon's account) that he had broken his parole was deeply painful to the brave and scrupulously honorable commander.

Still friendship rose above regret, and Clark resolved to push his little column forward all the more rapidly, hoping to arrive in time to prevent the impending execution.

Next morning the march was resumed at the break of dawn, but a swollen stream caused some hours of delay, during which Beverley himself arrived from the rear, a baggard and weirdly unkempt upstart. He had been for three days following hard on the ar-young man.

Clark had given Uncle Jazon his flask, which contained a few gills of whisky. This was the first thing offered to Beverley, who wisely took but a swallow. Uncle Jazon was so elated he waved his cap on high and unconsciously falling into French, yelled in a piercing voice:

"Vive l'Amour! Vive l'Amour! Vive l'Amour d'Alce Roussillon!"

Seeing Beverley remained him of Alice and the flag. As for Beverley, the sentiment braced him and the beloved name brimmed his heart with sweetness.

Clark went to meet them as they came in. He hugged the gaunt lieutenant with genuine fervor of joy. Once Jazon ran around them making a series of grotesque capers. The whole command, hearing Uncle Jazon's patriotic words, set up a wild shouting on the spur of a general impression that Beverley came as a messenger bearing glorious news from Washington's army in the east.

It was a great relief to Clark when he found out that his favorite lieutenant had not broken his parole, but had instead boldly resurrendered himself, declaring the obligation no longer binding and notifying Hamilton of his intention to go away with the purpose of returning and destroying him and his command.

Clark laughed heartily when this explanation brought out Beverley's tender interest in Alice, but he sympathized cordially, for he himself knew what love is.

Although Beverley was half starved and still suffering from the kicks and blows given him by Long Hair and his warriors, his exhausting run on the trail of Clark and his band had not worked him serious harm. All of the officers and men did their utmost to serve him. He was feasted without stint and furnished with everything that the scant supply of clothing on the pack horses could afford for his comfort.

He promptly asked for an assignment to duty in his company and took his place with such high enthusiasm that his companions regarded him with admiring wonder. None of them saw Clark and Uncle Jazon suspected that love for a fair-haired girl yonder in Vincennes was the secret of his amazing zeal and intrepidity.

LETTER FROM ARKANSAS.

POLLARD, ARK., March 6, 1904

—EDITOR PRESS: If you will allow me a little space in your good old paper, the Crittenden Press, I will as I have promised, let the readers know what I have learned of this country.

I am on the Cache river twelve miles from the Cotton Belt railroad, in Clay county.

This river runs through some of Arkansas' heavy timbered land, and my location now is in the midst of a large oak and cypress forest. These woods are full of game of many kinds, such as the deer, bear, wolf, wildcat, turkey, and abundance of smaller game. I have taken several hunts since I have been here, and with good success.

Land is cheap; you can get fine bottom land, unimproved, for five dollars an acre, and up to twelve dollars; hill land is cheaper.

This is a fine country for a poor man to get a good home cheap, as there are thousands of acres of land owned by land companies here that they are selling at the above prices, on terms to suit the purchaser.

They are giving the homeseeker this advantage to get this country settled up. The price of land is advancing, and the homeseeker who contemplates coming here to buy land in the future is losing out by not coming at once.

Lumbering and farming are the leading occupations of this country, and hands are scarce and hard to get. The lumber companies pay $1.50 and upward for hands, while farm wages range from $15 to $20 per month. Cotton and corn are the principal crops. Farmers leave their cattle out all winter, letting them graze on the green grass in the river bottoms, without any corn.

Every Monday morning you can see the farmers riding over the bottoms hunting up their cattle to salt them, and once a week is as often as they see them.

It is nice weather here and the farmers have begun breaking the ground, the meadows and timber is getting green, and everything is in flourishing condition.

Well, I guess I am the only Kentuckian anywhere near here, and you may be sure I would be glad to see one. It seems like home to me to read the Press.

Hoping this will escape the waste basket, I remain, as ever, an old Crittenden county boy. So good-bye.

Yours, respy,
John E. Roberts.

The Best Cough Syrup.

S. L. Apple, ex-Probate Judge, Ottawa Co., Kansas, writes: "This is to say that I have used Ballard's Honey Syrup for years, and that I do not hesitate to recommend it as the best cough syrup I have ever used." 25¢, doz., $1.00. Sold by Woods & Orme.

THE SUBMERGED BETTER HALF.

It was a woman, George Eliot, who said that the pettiness of women was one of the great retarding forces because they controlled the men and were constantly shrinking and narrowing them. Whether or no she was right, certain it is that a man whose mother or dearest sister or wife is a woman of high ambitions and broad ideas has his chances for a truly successful career at least doubled.

There are men strong enough, self-centred enough, to push ahead alone, men who are wholly independent of associations in forming their lives. But these are few. The vast majority of us need, cannot do without, assistance, advice, encouragement, sympathy. And for all this a woman is a man's natural and usual source. That is why the education of women is so important. That is why feminine crazes for slothful luxury, for social position, for the petty and incidental things of life are so depressing and even dangerous.

How can the man who hears nothing but foolishness at home and clamor for more money to spend in folly go to his work with high courage and stimulated ambition? —Saturday Evening Post.

Keeping everlastingly at it brings success.

Allison Boyd, jailer of Trigg county, 38 years of age, died last Monday at Cadiz.

A wedding at Princeton Monday performed by Judge Randolph, made S. D. McNeely, aged 65, and Miss Addie Creedman, aged 17, husband and wife.

Judge J. E. Gordon appointed M. J. Groom Master Commissioner of Caldwell county to succeed square W. C. Rucker. He is a representative citizen and the appointment is a good one.

Mr. James West, of Hopkinsville, is to be congratulated upon winning one of the belles of the Fredonia valley, in the person of Miss Ella Black. The wedding took place at St. George Hotel, Evansville, Ind., last week. The bride, a distinguished looking woman, of dignity and of a queenly bearing, attracted attention wherever she was. Miss Black has been a recognized leader in society in her section and will be a valuable addition to Hopkinsville society.

IN HARNESS AGAIN.

The copies of "The Herald" received here yesterday announce that Walter Walker, the popular Marion boy, has taken up his old love and entered again the newspaper world, by buying a half interest in the Herald at Grand Junction, Colorado.

The PRESS congratulates the Herald in securing the assistance of so bright and capable a man.

Mr. Walker was eminently successful with his newspaper work in Kentucky, and has friends here by the score, who will wish him success in his new field.

The Herald is a bright, clean, newsworthy sheet, and while this is the first copy we have seen, we feel sure it is improved already by his magic touch. At any rate, it's a first class paper.

ANTI-TRUST LAW APPLIES.

Washington, March 14.—The opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of the Northern Securities company against the United States, involving the merger of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern railroad companies, and handed down today and was in favor of the Government. The opinion was read by Justice Harlan.

The opinion of the United States Circuit Court for the district of Minnesota was affirmed.

The effect is to sustain the contention that the Anti Trust law applies to railroad combinations of the character in question.

Justice Harlan said that in the merger of the two roads, the stock holders disappeared and reappeared in the Securities company, the two thus becoming practically consolidated in a holding company, principal object being to prevent competition.

No scheme or device could certainly more effectively come within the prohibition of the anti-trust law and it is within the meaning of the act a trust."

LEG AMPUTATED.

Drs. J. W. Trisler and W. T. Daugherty, Moore of Tolu and Gardner, of Sheridan, were summoned in consultation on the condition of Geo Moore of Crittenden springs neighborhood, who is suffering from blood poisoning, the result of cutting his foot with an axe about five weeks ago. They decided to amputate his leg just below the knee, and this was done Sunday morning. The operation was successful and Mr. Moore was doing well at last reports. He is well up towards 80 years of age and is showing remarkable vitality. His many friends hope to see him up and out soon.

DAUGHTREY-FRANKLIN.

At the residence of the bride's brother, Mr. Elisha Franklin, Sunday morning last, Mr. Fred L. Daugherty and Miss Lillian Franklin were married by the writer in the presence of a few relatives and friends. Mr. Daugherty is a prosperous young farmer in the Fords Ferry community, while his intelligent and accomplished bride is the youngest daughter of that prince of good men, John Lewis Franklin. Thus another promising young couple start life's journey together. May life be to them a happy voyage and heaven their eternal harbor.

J. S. Henry.

Rev Jas Price's Mother Dead.

In the death of Mrs. Theresa Barnett Price, Marion loses her oldest citizen and one most highly respected, revered and beloved. Mrs. Price was the daughter of James and Rachel Travis and was born Nov. 12, 1812, in this county, (although it was not known as Crittenden county at that time), and died March 11th, 1904, aged 91 years, 3 months 29 days.

She professed religion at Piney Fork camp ground and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian church and was ever afterward a consistent member.

She was first married to Daniel Crider in 1831. She raised three children to maturity from that marriage—Elvira Wheeler, widow of Isaac Wheeler, dec'd, and mother of Miss Mina Wheeler, except, if school of this county and now of Milburn, I. T.; Emily Clark, dec'd, wife of W. M. Clark, also dec'd; Joe Ann Crowell, wife of J. E. Crowell, postmaster at Tradewater, Ky.

She was married to her second husband, John Price, in 1851, and to this union the Rev. James F. Price was born. She made her home here with him and was sheltered and protected from every hardship by his love and devotion.

IN MEMORIAM.

Dedicated to Aunt Theresa Price.
1812-1904.

As quiet as the drifted snow outside.
She lies now, almost as white and cold
That calm no force of earth has power
To break.

No loving voice can rouse her from
that sleep,
And hush'd those toil worn hands. And now she knows
The peace of God has touched those tired lids.

And still those toil worn hands. And
now she knows
The meaning of it all, those years of severe work,
Of back toil for others, hopes down
in her.

Almost before they came, and sees by sight
So hard to see by faith that it was well

STATE NEWS.

Last week, by a strange coincidence, Wm. Marsh, aged 67, died at his home in Henderson, and shortly after his death his family received a message stating that his twin brother died at the same hour at Marion, Ind.

Born, to the wife of L C Hibbs of Birdsville Sunday morning, a fine ten pound boy.

Miss Sallie Grassham of Salem is visiting the family of her brother, Attorney C. C. Grassham, this week.—Banner.

The marriage of Miss Geraldine Sanders, of Paducah, to Mr Chas. James, of Evansville, Ind., was announced last Thursday to take place Wednesday, March 30th, at the First Presbyterian church in Paducah, with Rev W. E. Cave officiating.

Mr. James is well known in Marion, where he is a regular caller on our merchants, and he is much liked by them.

Mrs Mattie Smith has moved to Atlanta, Ga., where she will reside in the future with her son, Glenn, who has a good paying position. Mrs. Smith and her daughter Mildred left Monday, much to the regret of their many friends.—Princeton Leader.

Wm Crowe has moved to Hampton, Livingston county, where he will make his future home. We regret much to lose him and his most estimable wife. Mr. Crowe is one of the best educators in this section of the State, he having taught in the best and largest district in the county and always giving entire satisfaction.—Princeton Leader.

There is considerable pressure being brought to bear on J. A. Deboe, our polite and ever obliging assistant postmaster, to induce him to become the political sacrifice the Republicans will offer on this presidential year to the voters of the First district. Mr. Deboe would poll not only the full party strength but a considerable complimentary vote, and while it is an absolute impossibility for any man to beat Ollie James in this district, we have no doubt that Mr. Deboe would poll a larger vote than any man who can be selected to lead the forlorn hope of his party. While we know that our advice is worth nothing to the party of the opposition we can not refrain from asking them why they should not put out a clean, straightforward Republican, like Clinton's assistant postmaster, and call off the undignified attempts at fusion that don't fuse.—Clinton Democrat.

Crittenden county will be democratic shortly and leave Caldwell county the distinction of being the only republican county in this district if the boys don't look out, for J. C. Hill, who has been here for some time visiting his friends near Frederonia will return to Washington state March 25th and take 51 of Crittenden's good citizens with him, nearly all of whom are republicans.

Then Sherman Woodall returned from Kansas the other day and will take back two car loads of Crittenden county people to settle there, and they are nearly all Republicans too. Hence when these two get done with the large emigration that has been going on the past season it is thought that there won't even be enough republicans left to even hold office, much less be chosen for jury duty.—Chronicle.

Henderson Gleaner: Last Saturday the P. A. Blackwell & Co. hardware firm made the largest sale in woven wire fencing ever recorded on its books to have been made to only one farmer. C. L. Gatlin, of Union county, purchased 1909 rolls of this fencing, which is ready for setting up. Should this fencing be joined and extended it would be a fraction less than six miles in length.

W. S. Lamb of Lewiston, happened to a right serious accident last week. While hauling logs in some manner a big one rolled over on his foot, mashing it very badly. He was disabled by the accident.

Cured Consumption.

Mrs. B. W. Evans, Charwater, Kan., writes: "My husband lay sick for three months. The doctors said he had quick consumption. We procured a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup, and it cured him. That was six years ago and since then we have always kept a bottle in the house. We cannot do without it. For coughs and colds it has no equal." 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by Woods & Orme.

WINDMILL IRRIGATION.

EDITOR PRESS: The early pioneer who first gave the name Garden City, to that little village in the midst of the arid desert in Southwest Kansas must have done so in derision, but it now seems as if there was something prophetic in the choice. A town once the center of a great cattle district in a country where water was scarce, and soil unproductive, is now in reality the garden spot of Kansas. This wonderful change has been brought about by means of windmill irrigation. For a long time it was thought that the country was only fit for cattle raising, but while it was found that the soil would be quite productive if a sufficient water supply could be obtained, irrigation was first tried by bringing water from the Arkansas river, but the river was usually dry when the water was most needed, and thousands of dollars were wasted by the fruitless scheme. Then about 1889, the plan of digging wells and pumping water into reservoirs by the means of the windmills was tried. It was found that the water supply underground was inexhaustible. Wells were dug to a depth of 40 feet.

This is the cheapest form of irrigation. The windmills pump the water as long as the wind blows strong enough, and the water is stored in reservoirs, where it is ready for use when the wind fails. The windmills cost less than two hundred dollars each, and the reservoirs being built of earth are quite economical. Sodding was first used as a covering for the bottom and sides, but some farmers drive their cattle over them until the ground is quite compact. Water is carried from the reservoirs through big ditches to the different fields, and from these main ditches numerous smaller ones run parallel across the fields between them rows of trees and vegetables are planted. A barren waste has thus been beautified and made a fertile and productive farming land.

The principal crops raised are sweet potatoe, cabbage, onions, watermelons and strawberries. Alfalfa hay is a very profitable crop, and has been mown four times a year, where windmill irrigation is used. An acre of ground yields two hundred bushels of sweet potatoe, and cabbage crops bring $600 per acre.

Farmers who do business on a large scale ship their products to the large wholesale markets of Kansas City and Denver, but many smaller farmers peddle their goods for fifty or seventy-five miles through the country, and to large cattle ranches and smaller towns outside the irrigation district, where garden supplies are always in demand.

The reservoirs bring other means of support and pleasure. When well stocked. They afford a good supply of fish. In winter enough ice can be obtained to last through the summer. To the farmer boys it is a continual source of amusement, through the skating in winter, and rowing, fishing and swimming in the summer months.

Rheumatism Cured

William Shaffer, a brakeman of Dennis, Ohio, was confined to his bed for several weeks with inflammatory rheumatism. "I used many remedies," he says. "Finally I sent to McCaw's drug store for a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, at which time I was unable to use hand or foot, and in one week's time was able to go to work as happy as a clam." For sale by Woods & Orme.

A LEAP YEAR LETTER.

Dear Charlie—

At last I'm a goner! My finger is wearing herring. And say, dear old fellow pon honor I'm mighty pleased with the thing.

You know who she is—little Mary. The girl with the opalesque eyes. She's jolly, and pretty and wary, And—her choice indicates she is wise.

For a fortnight or more I'd suspected

That I was her choice of the push,

Had an idea I'd been selected

As the rag she would snatch off the bush,

About three times a week she would phone me,

She had tickets secured for the play,

And after the show always run me For a lunch into Copher's cafe.

She called tother night, and the desire

Was togged with unusual care, In a gown that would drive a god leary,

And a rosebud she wore in her hair.

We had scarcely got fixed in position,

For the sparkling programmes of the night

Ere she rose without asking permission

And cunningly turned down the light.

Then she got down to business in stancer,

If she blushed it was lost in the dark,

Told her story and won in a canter,

And placed on my finger the spark.

And she sealed the betrothal with something,

The thing that the coldest lips warme,

And I didn't, you bet, do a dum-thing

But bundly myself up in her arms.

And so its all over, old Charlie,

The Rubicon's passed, as it were;

It's me to the altar quite early

In May, when the other birds pair.

The tailors as beavers are busy,

At work on my trousseau, you know,

And say, 'twill be actually dizzy!

Yours, b'ilin with happiness,

JOE.

L. BARNES.

Feb 11, 1904, after an illness of only a few hours, L. Barnes passed to his eternal rest, in his 71st year. He was reared in this country on a farm and when eighteen years of age entered apprenticeship to J. I. Miller, saddler, of Salem. He was next to the youngest of a family of eight children, only two of which survive him, the oldest and youngest.

The Barnes family were among the pioneer settlers of this section and had much to do with moulding its future.

He was first married to Julia Terry, in the year 1854. Of this union one child survives, Mrs. Duke Roney. He was again married to Mary E. Cossitt in the year 1862. Of this union the widow and two children survive, Mrs. R. A. LaRue of Levies and Miss Fleta Barnes, of Salem.

He was a man of striking devotion to his family, and denied him self of many of the so called pleasures of the world to spend his leisure around his own pleasant fireside. He professed faith in Christ and united with the Union church in early life.

His funeral services were held in this church, conducted by Eld. J. S. Henry in the presence of many sorrowing friends and his body laid to rest in Union cemetery, in hope of the resurrection.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth, that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

Colds Cause Pneumonia.

One of the most remarkable cases of a cold, deep-seated on the lungs, causing pneumonia, is that of Mrs. Gertrude E. Fenner, Marion, Ind., who was entirely cured by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. She says: "The coughing and straining so weakened me that I ran down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength." Sold by all druggists.

For Children Under 12.

The Remorseful Cakes.

A little boy named Thomas ate Hot buckwheat cakes for tea. A very rash proceeding as We presently shall see.

He went to bed at eight o'clock. As all good children do, But scarce had closed his little eyes.

When he most restless grew He flopped on this side, then on that,

Then crawled upon his head, And covered all at once each spot Of his wee trundle bed.

He wrapped one leg around his waist.

And 'tother round his ear. While mama wondered what on earth

Could ait her little dear. But sound he slept and as he slept He dreamed an awful dream.

Of being spanked with birch-tree slabs.

Without the power to scream.

He dreamt a great big iron cage And ripped and raved and roared While on his breast two furious bulls.

In mortal combat goared.

He dreamt he heard the flop of wings.

Within the chimney flew. And down there crawled to gnaw his ears.

An awful bugaboo!

When Thomas rose next morn his face Was pallid as a sheet.

"I never more," he firmly said, "Will cakes for supper eat."

The Dog Without a Tail

A poor dog that had been so unfortunate as to lose his tail, met another dog who was still enjoying the use of all his bodily members.

"Accept my sympathy," said the one dog to the other.

"For what reason?" he asked.

"Because of your tailless condition," came the response.

"I thank you for your good intention but I assure you that I am not as much in need of sympathy as you imagine."

"And how can that be?"

"Because there are some advantages in having no tail. First, the boys can no longer tie tin cans to it. Second, I have less weight to carry, which is a great blessing to me when I am in a hurry. I have no tail to be tramped upon when I am trying to take a nap in the kitchen."

Moral: Instead of brooding over your misfortunes, look on the bright side of things."

MY BANTYS (A Prize Story)

I have some little Bantys and I will tell you something about them.

I have one which is real cute. When she comes in the house and I say, "Go out, Banty," she will turn and walk out.

Sometimes she does not tell the truth; she gets on her nest and stays awhile, then she gets off and cackles. I think she has laid and a go to get her egg but I find that she has not.

I had a little red rooster, but one night old Jack Frost came and冻了 his feet so that he could not walk and I had to have him killed.

He was awful smart and would crow when I told him to. His name was Barnabas.

After the red rooster was killed I got a little white and brown spotted one and a little brown hen.

These Bantys are not smart like my others. They are as wild as they can be; but I will teach them to be tame, like the others are.

A. B. C.

A Nursery Jingle.

I had a little greenback. His name was Dollar Bill; I lent it to a fellow. It's lent unto him still.

He took it; he spent it. And this I have to say. I'll never lend him any more Because he keeps away.

Puzzle for this week: What is which, when running fastest is standing still?

All Work and No Play.

I'd like to be a boy again, without a woe or care, with freckles scattered o'er my face and hayseed in my hair; I'd like to rise at 4 o'clock and do a hundred chores, and saw the wood and feed the hogs and lock the stable doors;

and herd the hens, and watch the bees and take the mules to drink, and teach the turkeys how to swim so they won't sink; and milk about a hundred cows and bring in wood to burn, and stand out in the sun and churn and churn and churn; and wear my brother's cast off clothes and walk a mile to school, and get a whipping every day for breaking some old rule; and then and then go home again at night and do the chores once more, and milk the cows and feed the hogs and curry mules galore; and crawl wearily upstairs to seek my little bed, and hear dad say, "That worthless boy; he doesn't earn his bread;" I'd like to be a boy again, a boy has so much fun, his life is just a round of mirth from rise till set of sun; I guess there's nothing pleasanter than closing stable doors, and herding hens and chasing bees and doing the evening chores.—Ex.

IN MEMORIUM.

On a bright summer day—Aug. 26th, 1899, there came into the home of S. H. and Lucy Matthews a little sunbeam, a tender rosebud—they called her Reba. For more than four years and a half she remained the delight of a proud father and the hope of a loving mother.

Sweet and beautiful as the rose bud tipped with the morning dew, with busy feet, prattling tongue, and fairy like ways, she was the delight of all who knew her.

But alas! When the earth was held in the icy grasp of midwinter, and white the flowers she loved so well were buried beneath the cruel snow and sleet, she too was summoned, for on Feb. 11th, 1904, the frost of death fell upon the lovely child.

The feet will walk no more upon earth; the gentle zephyr and bird song will not be heard, the tongue is still, and the beautiful form is gone. A child no more but an angel, rejoicing around the throne on high, watching and waiting for father, mother and little brothers.

Weep not, dear parents, the tiny golden thread which binds you to the great white throne will grow stronger day by day, drawing you at last to the loved one on high.

Dear grandparents be comforted for it can not be long till the little hand that led you here and the sweet voice that bade you follow, will greet you at the golden portals, and bid you enter into eternal rest.

Bereaved ones all, allow the great Comforter to bind up your broken hearts, for these beloved jewels of earth are yours only for a day, but His forever.

And the mother gave, in tears and pain,

The flowers she most did love; She knew she should find them all again

In fields of light above.

Oh, not in cruelty, not in wrath, The roarer came that day: 'Twas an angel visited the green earth.

And took the flower away. Her Uncle.
